LONDON, September 26.

Extract of a letter dated Hamburg Sept. 13.

"We have here nothing ſtirring, and are almoſt weary of even forming conjectures concerning the ſtate of politics. We look forward with ſome apprehenſion to winter, when we ſhall ſeverely feel the effects of the blockade, in the want of coals from England; the ſugar refiners cannot proceed without a ſupply. Whatever hopes ſome people's intereſt may lead them to entertain of the ſpeedy evacuation of Hanover by the French, it does not ſeem very likely that ſuch an event is very near at hand. This very morning I myſelf ſpoke to a French gentleman, enjoying a conſiderable place under the government, whom I have known a long time, and who has this morning returned from a viſit to general Mortier, at Hanover. He ſaid, there was very little probability of the French leaving the electorate, and that their force there was now ſtronger than ever, being not leſs than 40,000 men."

September 27.

The French talk of the month of November as the period for attack, and it may be believed, that when their preparations are ready they will make an attack on ſome part of the Britiſh European dominions, unleſs they are prevented by the elements or intercepted by our navy.

The blockade of the Elbe produces the greateſt diſtreſs at Hamburg. The journey of Mr. Liſton thither, it was hoped, might tend to faciſitate the reſtoration of the commerce of that place, of which we ſee little proſpect while the French continue in poſſeſſion of Hanover.

The following is a copy of a letter addreſſed by his royal highneſs Monſieur, to his Britannic majeſty. It was, probably, owing to this letter that a report was lately circulated of the French princes being about to erect the royal ſtandard on the continent:

Monſieur mon Frere et Couſine. It is with a feeling the moſt juſt, and with the livelieſt ſenſe of gratitude, that I avail myſelf of exiſting circumſtances, to demand of your majeſty, on my own behalf, in that of my ſons, of the princes my couſins, and of all Frenchmen reſiding in your majeſty's dominions, that you would be pleaſed to allow us to unite ourſelves to your faithful ſubjects, and to offer our ſervices againſt our common enemy.

We are Frenchmen, Sire, and neither our misfortunes, nor the many acts of injuſtice we have experienced, have weakened the ſacred ties that bind us to our country, but the man who has for the preſent ſubjugated France, and rendered it the inſtrument of his perfidious ambition, is in truth as much the enemy of every Frenchman, as he is of your majeſty and of your paternal government. On taking this ſtep, we therefore fulfil a double duty; and if your majeſty deſigns to accept of our ſervices, we will enter into a rivalſhip with your loyal ſubjects, in order to prove to you the full extent of our gratitude.

I pray your majeſty to receive with your uſual goodneſs, the homage equally ſincere as reſpectful, of every ſentiment with which I ſhall always remain.

MONS. MON FRERE ET COUSINS.

September 28.

Miniſters are ſaid to have obtained very important information reſpecting the meditated invaſion, and that it will be attempted immediately, but againſt what particular point of the coaſt the conſul intends to direct his firſt attack, muſt be left to the vigilance of our cruiſers to aſcertain. It is reported at Dover that Buonaparte will be at Oſtend in the courſe of the preſent week, at the embarkation of a diviſion of the army deſtined for this ſervice; and the neceſſary meaſures of precaution have accordingly been adopted in every direction by us. Mr. Pitt, as colonel-commandant of the cinque port volunteers, is to meet the mayor of Dover this day upon the ſubject, and the troops have every where received orders to march at an hour's notice.

At the out ports, a ſevere preſs for ſeamen has again taken place, and every movement of government ſhews that ſome ſtrong meaſure, either of defence or offence, is about to be reſorted to very ſpeedily.

September 30.

Major Mackenzie, who has been detained in France as a priſoner, along with the other Engliſh ever ſince the breaking out of the war, arrived in town on Wedneſday laſt. He was one of the gentlemen ſent to Fontainbleau, not on their parole of honour, but confined in the moſt irregular way, merely becauſe they were ſubjects of his Britannic majeſty. About a fortnight ago major Mackenzie ſet off for England by the way of Bruſſels, Antwerp and Holland. He had an opportunity of ſeeing the ſtate of the preparations for a deſcent on England, in the different ports of Holland and Flanders. He ſays, that in every river, and upon every canal, they are actively employed in the building of boats. In the Seine, their chaloupes, cannoniers are veſſels extremely ſlight in their form, about ſixty feet long, nine feet broad, and about four feet deep in the hold. Thoſe built in Holland are ſtronger and more ſea-worthy. In the latter, the men would be completely protected againſt the muſketry by the height of the ſides; but they are very ill adapted to the ſmalleſt grape. There are a great number, indeed, on the ſtocks, but very few ready for ſea. In the opinion of major Mackenzie, the French certainly cannot now hazard an attack upon England.

The damage ſuſtained by the dreadful fire which lately happened at Bombay, is computed at ſix hundred and fifty thouſand pounds; nearly five hundred horſes were burnt to death. The houſes deſtroyed will not again be erected where they formerly ſtood, which is a meaſure calculated to guard againſt a ſimilar calamity.

ATTACK ON CALAIS.

It would appear, by comparing the different accounts which have reached us, that the attack on Calais ceaſed with the cauſe which gave riſe to it. A number of gun boats were known to be there preparing to ſail, and accounts had been received by our cruiſers that a much greater number, ſome ſay 150 gun boats, were about to leave Oſtend. Of courſe it became an object of moment to prevent, if poſſible, any kind of co-operation, and an attempt was made to deſtroy thoſe at the former place.

The attack commenced on Tueſday, as we have before informed our readers, but we have ſince learnt ſome important particulars, not yet ſtated. A cannonade was firſt made to the eaſtward, at Dunkirk it is believed, to draw the attention of the enemy that way, and this manœuvre ſuccreded ſo effectually, that when our ſquadron bore in upon Calais, the cannonade and bombardment was ſo ſudden and unexpected, that the enemy could not get their gun and flat bottomed boats up the harbour, out of the reach of our fire. It was even a conſiderable time before they recovered ſo much from their ſurprize and confuſion as to be able to fire a ſingle ſhot; ſo that our veſſels were able to do them a great deal of miſchief. They afterwards opened a fire upon our ſquadron from every point of the ſhore, but we are happy to ſtate, that on that occaſion not a ſingle individual was killed, or even wounded, on board our veſſels.

The greater part of our ſhells were ſeen to fall among their gun boats, when they could not fail to do a great deal of damage. None of them fell ſhort of the boats, but ſome went over in the town, where they did much miſchief, eſpecially in the eaſt quarter, which was ſet on fire in different places.

Whether the enemy had the temerity to imagine they could face our flotilla, or found themſelves ſo much annoyed where they were, that they thought they would be as ſafe to endeavour to ſkirt along the ſhore to ſome other poſt under the protection of the numerous batteries which line the coaſt, and in conſequence ventured to quit the harbour of Calais, we cannot take upon us to determine. We are, however, rather inclined to attribute their movement to the latter motive, which would alſo be ſtrengthened by the conſideration that, by quitting the harbour, they would draw away our fire from Calais, which was ſuffering ſeverely by the bombardment, the town being in a blaze in different quarters. But whatever was the inducement, it is certain, that on Wedneſday morning from 25 to 30 of the gun boats were ſeen to come out of Calais harbour, as we yeſterday ſtated.

They appeared at firſt to have an intention to proceed to the eaſtward, but ſoon after, probably in conſequence of perceiving ſome of our veſſels too much in ſhore to allow of their paſſing, without more riſk than they were willing to encounter, they changed their courſe and proceeded along ſhore towards Boulogne. Our flotilla purſued them keeping up a briſk fire, and ſailing as near ſhore as the depth of water would allow. The gun boats could be plainly ſeen from Dover, between our veſſels and the ſhore, One of the frigates and a gun brig were conſtantly enveloped in ſmoke. The whole of the French coaſt extending from the cliffs at the weſtward of Calais, to the entrance into Boulogne Bay, was one continued line of ſmoke, and the wind being to the eaſtward almoſt every gun was heard on the oppoſite Engliſh coaſt. Some of the enemy's boats were driven on ſhore, but the greater part, it is believed, made their way into the bay of Boulogne, whither our fleet was ſeen to be chaſing them about half paſt two o'clock on Wedneſday, ſtill keeping up ſuch a tremendous fire, that they muſt have ſuffered very ſeverely.

It would appear, however, by the accounts that have reached us this morning, that they are likely to experience as little civility from our ſquadron in their preſent quarters as in thoſe they laſt quitted; for with the dawn of day, a freſh cannonade and bombardment commenced again yeſterday, and continued till between three and four o'clock, when it became moſt tremendouſly heavy. The French coaſt being covered with a heavy fog our ſquadron could not be ſeen from the coaſt about Dover, but from the ſound its direction plainly appeared to come from Boulogne, whither our brave tars had chaſed the enemy the preceding day. Next poſt we expect will bring us ſome intereſting particulars reſpecting the attack. In the mean-time we ſubjoin the following.

Admiralty-office, Oct. 1.

Copy of a letter from rear-admiral Montagu to Sir Evan Nepean, bart. dated on board H. M. S. Utrecht, Downs, Sept. 28.

SIR,

Encloſed I have the honour to tranſmit a duplicate of intelligence received from captain Jackſon, of the Autumn, the original being tranſmitted to the commander in chief.

I am, &c.

MONTAGU.

His majeſty's ſloop Autumn, off Calais, September 28.

The wind ſpringing up yeſterday morning from the eaſtward, I thought it a proper opportunity to attack the enemy's veſſels in Calais, in order that they ſhould not get them up the harbour out of the reach of our fire. I waited till it was half ebb in the harbour, at which time they took the ground; we then bore up and after trying and finding out the diſtance, we anchored; the bombs to the N. E. of the town, the other part of the ſquadron abreaſt of the town and pier heads, to draw the enemy's fire as much as we could from the bombs, ſo as not to prevent their acting. After we anchored abreaſt of the town and pier head battery, the enemy opened their fire on us from all directions, amongſt which I found they had mortars; the firſt ſhell fell within a ſhip's length of us and burſt under water; our veſſels at that time were ſo cloſe, that I thought there was a great probability ſome of their ſhells might fall on board, whilſt I found our ſhot (though they all reached the pier heads) would not go ſo far up as their ſhips. I therefore made the ſignal to weigh and open to a greater diſtance, remaining at anchor myſelf. The ſquadron has been very fortunate in receiving no damage from the enemy's fire. The bombs were not keeping a well directed fire, many of the ſhells evidently falling in the midſt of their gun boats; the ſhells that fell over their gun boats went into the town, and muſt have done great damage; the end of the town appeared to be on fire for ſome time. From the enemy's boats and veſſels being covered under the land, it was impoſſible to judge what damage they ſuſtained, but it muſt have been conſiderable; it not came on to blow ſo freſh from the N. E. that the ſprings would not hold the ſhip againſt the wind and tide; the Tartarus's anchor having given way, I was obliged to make the ſignal to diſcontinue their fire.

I have honour to be, &c.

Copy of a letter from admiral lork Keith, to Sir Evan Nepean, bart. dated Monarch, off Broadſtairs, September 30.

SIR,

I encloſe for their lordſhip's information, a copy of a letter from captain Houcyman, of his majeſty's ſhip Leda, to rear-admiral Montagu, reporting the attempts which he had made, with his majeſty's ſhip and veſſels under his order, to obſtruct the progreſs of the enemy's gun boats from the eaſtward toward the port of Boulogne; and have the honour to he &c.

KEITH.

His majesty's ship Leda, off Boulogne, September 29, 1803.

SIR,

In anſwer to yours of this date, I have the honour to acquaint you that the enemy's gun veſſels, being twenty-ſix in number, were yeſterday diſcovered coming out of Calais, ſoon after I had diſpatched lieutenant Cameron to you. I immediately gave chaſe with the ſquadron under my command; but although every exertion was uſed on our part, they anchored cloſe in with the pier at Boulogne, after a ſevere cannonade of three hours, which was returned from them as well as their numerous batteries on ſhore. It was my intention to bombard them in that ſituation, and had made the ſignal for that purpoſe; but the wind blowing ſtrong off ſhore, and a lee tide, prevented the bombs from taking their ſtations accordingly. At day light this morning, another ſquadron of the enemy's gun boats (25 in number) were diſcovered coming from the eaſtward. Immediately proceeded to attack them, and after a ſevere cannonade for nearly three hours, they anchored in the ſituation with the veſſels laſt night, with the loſs of two of them, they having been driven on ſhore, and bilged upon the rocks. There are at preſent fifty-five gun veſſels at anchor outſide the pier at Boulogne. I am happy to add that I have not received reports of any material injury being done to any of the ſqurdron under my command. A ſhell fell on board the Leda, which burſt in her hold, doing little injury to the ſhip, and without hurting a man.

I have the honour to be, &c.

R. HONEYMAN.

NEW-YORK, November 11.

By a gentleman from Pittſburg, we are informed, that ſix veſſels have been lately launched from the ſhip yard there, one of four hundred tuns burthen. They are the property of a company of merchants from Paris, who intend to deſcend the Ohio. Several veſſels are on the ſtocks at Marietta, and one at Elizabeth-town.

PHILADELPHIA, November 16.

FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN.

Capt. Elwell, who arrived at Boſton the 6th inſt. from Malaga, ſailed from that place on the 28th of September. There was no doubt that the Moors had commenced war againſt the United States. The pretext was the capture of the Tripoline ſhip under Mooriſh colours.

The ſhip taken from the Moors had ſailed for the United States.

The Mooriſh admiral's frigate, of 32 guns, was out on a cruiſe.

On the 30th of September, in long. 8, capt. Elwell was boarded from the frigate Adams, from Gibraltar, bound home, with three veſſels under convoy. The officers informed, that the day previous they had learnt, from a Britiſh ſhip, that ſhe had met a Mooriſh frigate, with three American veſſels as prizes.

Early in September there were three or four ſmall Mooriſh armed veſſels at Gibraltar, with ſealed orders.

When the hoſtile diſpoſition of the emperor was aſcertained, all the United States veſſels at Gibraltar put to ſea for the protection of the trade, and orders were diſpatched up the Mediterranean for ſome of the government ſhips to come down. Two or three of the ſmaller cruiſers had fortunately arrived from America; and the ſtrength of our ſquadron at the Straits is ſufficient to prevent any conſiderable apprehenſions for the ſafety of merchant veſſels.

War between France and Spain was expected at Malaga.

The report that lord Nelſon had bombarded Algiers was received and credited.

WASHINGTON, November 17.

Expiration of part of the British treaty.

In the laſt article of this treaty it is provided that the firſt ten articles ſhall be permanent, and that if the 12th article ſhould not be renewed, or an arrangement upon the ſubject of it agreed to before it ſhould expire by its own limitation (neither of which conditions has taken place) that then the whole treaty except the ten firſt articles ſhould expire together with it. This limitation was to two years after the ſignature of the preliminary or other articles of peace, which took place on the firſt of October, 1801. Conſequently on the firſt of October laſt, all the articles of the treaty, except the ten firſt, expired.

Extract of a letter to a commercial house in this city from Messrs. Kuhn, Green & Co. merchants, at Genoa, dated August 27, 1803.

New-York, November 5.

"You will pleaſe to inform your friends trading to this quarter, that by the laſt mail from Leghorn we have advices of the French commandant there having declared Leghorn a port of the French republic; and that, accordingly, the arrette prohibiting the importation of all ſpecies of Britiſh productions and manufacture into the ports of France extended to that of Leghorn.

"Theſe proceedings have created much alarm, and it is generally expected that the blockade of Leghorn by the Britiſh will be the reſult.

"Commodore Morris is on a viſit to the queen at Florence, to remonſtrate againſt theſe proceedings as being derogatory to the intereſt of the United States.

"By the laſt advices from our houſe at Gibraltar, we obſerve that Weſt-India produce has declined conſiderably, owing to the number of French prizes brought in there."

BALTIMORE, November 18.

Extract of a letter from a respectable merchant in Lisbon, dated 30th September, to his correspondent in New-York, received via Philadelphia.

"A French fleet of 16 ſhips of the line and frigates have ſailed from Breſt for Ireland, with troops on board, and a Britiſh fleet is in purſuit of them."

TRAY—Dog, to REYNARD—Fox.

A YOUNG man of brightlineſs and talents, accuſed his friend of being under the dominion of the base passion; the friend thus allegorically replied.

The Fox accuſed the Dog of envying him; no, ſays the affectionate, faithful, ſagacious, intelligent ſpaniel, I admire particular traits in your character, your unparallelled cunning, your agility, activity, enterprize, energy, resource when urged by the swift and blood searching greyhound, and your well known provident and progging abilities, which always keep you in plenty; in fact, I admire your penetration, your intellects, but I do not envy you; I have ſtudied myſelf, have diſcovered the rate of my powers, and the ſtation which nature has intended for me, my humble, ſtill and peaceful lot, does not torture me, but has, on the contrary, contributed towards determining me to figure as a dog, to ſhine in the place Providence has appointed me, to be faithful to my maſter and my duty, to watch over and guard what is his with the utmoſt diligence, and to glance, with a pious eye, calm but ſanguine, at ſomething more exalted in the great inviſible, and, to ſublunary beings, myſterious world, to where we ſhall be rewarded or puniſhed according to our deſerts here, with exact, but mild, chancery Heavenly juſtice. But ſhould I ever be induced to become the ſlave of the "green eyed monſter," I ſhould mount on the battered, crazy, uneven, but everlaſting wing of envy, to ſomething far above me, I ſhould not envy the rat, the cat, the deer, the falſe paunch of the opoſſum, the fierce tyger, or the ſhrewd fox, but torments would attend my thoughts at the ſuperiority of the victorious, awe bringing lion, of the noble, brave, ſubmiſſive horſe, of the honeſt, uſeful ox, or the majeſtic, kingly elephant, whoſe near approach to the Godlike attributes of man would put me to the rack; indeed, my envy would be pointed towards man, glorious rational man, formed after the image of creations architect.

H. HAYDEN,
DENTIST,

GRATEFULLY acknowledges the liberal encouragement he has experienced from the ladies and gentlemen of Annapolis, during his former visits to this city; and from the numerous opportunities he has had in this place of evincing the utility of a judicious operation on the teeth and gums, he deems it unnecessary to enter into a detail of the variety of cases incident to the teeth, or the advantages to be derived from a seasonable application for professional aid; he therefore presents his warmest respects to his friends and patrons, and to the honourable gentlemen of the legislature, and solicits their confidence and patronage.

All diseases of the gums, and operations on the teeth, will be treated with every mark of delicacy and tenderness.

As the time of his stay will be but four weeks, those who wish his assistance are requested to make seasonable application at his lodgings, at Mr. Brewer's, opposite the episcopal church, where may be had genuine tooth powder and brushes.

ADVERTISEMENT.

A NATIVE and citizen of France, and once possessed of a large and abundant fortune, situated in the island of St. Domingo, I necessarily contracted some debts in France, and also in that island. These debts were very inconsiderable, when compared with my ability to pay them, and would have been promptly discharged if demanded whilst my situation remained as it was when they were contracted. The troubles of my native country drove me to seek refuge in Maryland in the year 1793, and the subsequent revolutions in St. Domingo have stript me of all my property, except a mere trifle, which I brought with me to Maryland. Those who had demands against me for European transactions have taken from me that trifle I had here, and have left me unable to pay the demands of the like nature that are still outstanding against me. To protect my body, sixty-five years old, and worn down with disease and misfortune, from the horrors of a gaol, I shall petition the next general assembly of the state of Maryland to pass an insolvent act in my favour, of which I thus publicly give notice.

Forty Dollars Reward,

FOR apprehending and securing negro SAM; he is about twenty-five or twenty-six years of age, of a dark complexion, and upwards of five feet high, very stout made, and had on a felt hat, nearly new, a short round blue jacket, and a pair of new tickleburg trousers, fringed at the bottom. He made his escape in the month of May, 1802, and very likely has changed his cloathing; he is said to resort a negro quarter of Mr. Brice Worthington's, where his father lives, and at other times at Mr. John Chew Thomas's, where he formerly had a wife. Whoever takes up and secures him in gaol, so that I get him again, shall receive the above reward, paid by 2S

AGUE AND FEVER.

PERSONS afflicted with this disease are respectfully informed, that a certain, safe, and expeditious cure for the same is to obtained by the application of Herbert's air pump vapour bath, which has in several instances relieved persons afflicted with this disease in twenty-four hours.

The air pump vapour bath is an efficacious remedy in gout, rheumatism, palsy, contractions, enlargements of joints, cutaneous, almost all chronic, and many acute diseases.

Complaints, particularly incident to females, which too generally baffle the remedies hitherto applied, and to which they frequently fall victims in the prime of life, are readily and effectually removed by the application of this machine.

Persons desirous of further information respecting the nature and effects of the air pump vapour bath, will please to apply to the proprietor, No. 3, East-street, Baltimore. 7

N. B. All applications by letter must be post paid.
Terms may be known by applying to Mr. Green.

Ten Dollars Reward.

RAN away the Wednesday after Whitsunday last, a negro boy named HEZ, about nineteen years of age, five feet high, he is a black fellow, and stammers when spoken to, he is an artful villain, and on the left or right shoulder is a mark by a burn when a child; had on when he went away, a long blue coat, a pair of corduroy pantaloons, an osnabrig shirt. I suppose he is harboured by his father who belongs to Walter Clagett, in Anne-Arundel county, near Queen-Anne. Whoever takes up said fellow, and secures him in any gaol, so that I may get him again, shall receive the above reward, paid by

BENJ. DUVALL, of ELISHA.

N. B. I forewarn all persons from harbouring said fellow on their peril. 3Z

The subscriber has ready made, and for SALE, at his house, near the Sadt-house, the following articles of household furniture, viz.
